Full job description

Your new company

This South Australian privately owned manufacturer is a true success story, providing high quality produce across 4 sites in South Australia to a National client base. They are a recognised retail brand that keeps growing in popularity which has given strong growth over the years. A strong sense of community this organisation is active in the areas in which they live and work, they aim for a sustainable business that also supports local relationships. An opportunity has now been created for an Industrial Electrician to join the team.

Your new role

As a key part of the team you will ensure that the plant is maintained and in good working order to provide reliable stocks and high-quality product to Australians Nationally. Your role will include project and planned works but also breakdown maintenance. You will contribute ideas for continuous improvement on the plant and work closely with other teams to develop new plans or procedures. In addition to the project work you will also respond to breakdowns, as this is a manufacturing environment you will respond quickly and use your problem-solving skills and technical solutions to get the plant operating again.

What you'll need to succeed

- A Class Electrical License
- Ability to fault find
- Basic PLC programming and maintenance knowledge
- Able to read and follow electrical diagram and plans
- Experience in food manufacturing (desirable but not essential)
- Dual Trade as Fitter (desirable but not essential)

What you'll get in return

You will become part of an exciting organisation that is well known for putting its people at the forefront of what they do. They create a work environment that people want to be a part of due to the team culture, the work premises and the type of work they undertake. You will have the opportunity to upskill and develop your skills in areas that interest you, with the support and backing of the business. In return for your skill and commitment you'll be rewarded with good working hours, a secure role, and a strong remuneration package.
